Dreaming of Me.

My love she lay in slumber light, Though morn was in the sky. And so I dropped the curtain white, 'And took a seat near by.

"She dreams of me, my darling wife," I cried as o'er her face Dimples and smiles alternately, In merry play gave chase.

I watched her quivering eyelids move, So like a lile's cup. Tiff, starting from her trance of love,

My darling one wake up. "Ob, such a dream I've had," cried she. "Of angels?" queried 1. " Hetter than that ; more dear to me

Than anget ministry !" "Dreaming of me," my valu heart cried, " Of me, her all in all ;"

And heart had such a fall. "I shought a fairy came," she said, " And spread before my syes Such lovely setion, silks and shawle,

But soon the bright illusion died,

As filled me with surprise. " And as for lewels, why, my dear, Each bright and dazzling gem That shope so beautiful, might grace A monarch's diadem."

"And all were mine." In saddened tone I stopped her utterance free ; And so, my darling, when you slept You had so dream of me?"

> She threw her arms about my neck, All of her own sweet will-Yes, precious one, I'm sure I had ; i dreamed you paid the bill !"

TRANSATLANTIC REPORTING .- The "personal" announcements in Western papers combine conciseness with a pleasant vagueness; as, for exam-ple, a Nevada journal says, "There was no regu-lar trial in the case of John Flanders yesterday. He had an interview in the woods with a few friends, however, and it is perfectly certain that John will never burgle any more.'

Lady Barker, in a recent work, gives her idea of a modle boy as follows: " If I could make a modle boy, I'll tell you what he should be like. He should love cold water and hate a lie. He should be frank and unsuspicious as becomes a noble, trusting nature, and yet he should be neither silly nor soft. He should have plenty of manias. He should have an appetite like a wolf, for I should wish him to be tall and strong; but he must not be a bit greedy. He should have a fine, sweet temper, yet he should be as the Yankee song says, 'an orkered man in a row,' and he should know how to take care of himself with

The Louisville Courier-Journal is responsible for the following: "Gentlemen," said a pious old Democrat to the bystanders on the streets in Nashville last Tuesday afternoon, for the last forty years I have endeavored to live the life of a consistent Christian, and during that whole time I have studiously avoided the utterance of all STENCIL CUTTER IN PLANTATION, language unbecoming the Christian character, but I cannot speak of this thing without giving away to the wildest profanity; you will therefore excuse me when I say that the man, woman or child who voted for Andrew Johnson, or was any way instrumental in securing his elect to the United States Senate, is a miserably and ostentatiously ramified subcutaneous parallax and I don't care what preacher hears me say so."" The Bloomington (Ill.) Pantograph says: Mr. Damon, a gentleman selling shoes for a leading manufactory of Worcester (Mass.), was in the city yesterday, and in addition to his other baggage brought with him and exhibited to a few admiring friends a shoe that has done good service on the foot of a reigning belle of Sandusky, Ohio. This delicate souvenir might well be placed in comparison with the glass that com-pressed the arching instep of Cinderella. The Sandusky belle's is numbered "17, extra large," is fourteen inches from toe to heel, and six inches across the broadest part of the sole. In addition to the main edifice there is a bay window on the east side of the gaiter, to accommodate a few exotic bunions, and an extensive corn patch to the west. A back porch has also been constructed on the heel to protect a growth in that direction, while one tiny toenail has cut a gash like a spade slash out into daylight on the northern most point of the structure. The girl only weighs 85 pounds, and has received a commission to go west next Summer to tramp grasshoppers in Colorado.
